

August 6th: Feast of the Transfiguration of the Lord (A)

Gospel text (Mt 17:1-9): Jesus took Peter, James, and his brother, John, and led them up a high mountain by themselves. And he was transfigured before them; his face shone like the sun and his clothes became white as light. And behold, Moses and Elijah appeared to them, conversing with him... As they were coming down from the mountain, Jesus charged them, "Do not tell the vision to anyone until the Son of Man has been raised from the dead."

On the "mount" of Transfiguration

Today, we see the Lord carrying His three favorite ones, and taking them to a mountain. We will find them together again on another mountain —Mount of Olives— in the Lord's extreme distress, as an image contrasting with the Transfiguration, although both are inextricably interrelated: the divinity of Jesus is related to the Cross; only in that relationship we can correctly recognize Jesus Christ.

The scene, other than the various "mountains" of the life of Christ (Calvary, Ascension...), reminds us of the mountains of Old Testament revelation (Horeb, Sinai, and Moriah): they are mountains of "passion" and "revelation" at the same time. Moses and Elijah received God's revelation on the mount: now they are talking with He Who is Revelation (and Law) in person. With their suffering, both were figures of the passion: now they are talking about the impending Passion of the Transfigured.

—Jesus, while we go down the mountain, You speak about your "resurrection from the dead": our hope will pass through Mount Calvary.
